FOUNDATION FOR AFRICAN SOCIAL ENTREPRENEURSHIP

March 2022 Issue

Thanks to our partners - We did it again!!

FASE develops capacity and links the diaspora, social networks, and home communities in sustainable development initiatives based on the social entrepreneurship model.

Thanks to our UK branch.

Daler Rowney has sent us another shipment. These high-value arts supplies were donated by Daler Rowney: Art Supplies & Manufacturer, UK. Daler Rowney was created in 1783 with the goal of inspiring artists via the provision of long-lasting, high-quality art materials

Mrs. Patricia Eastwood's family and friends are thanked, and very significantly Daler-Rowney.

"This is one of its kind!"

Plans are underway to establish a community arts center. This will be a collaborative project between Earnest Bai Koroma University, the Patloko community, and FASE with support from its UK partners.

The proposed arts center will be a learning facility, and cultural display representing the community's and its surroundings' uniqueness in preserving its cultural identity. We've already found a location, and once it is up and running, the center should be self-sustaining thanks to sales of artwork, tours, and visits.

They've been waiting for this moment - a free health screening and medication.

Our January visit was unexpected to avoid the rush for treatment from the nearby villages. This is a situation we experience during our last visit.

For many of our those who came, this was the first and only time they've received a health care screening in years. Thanks to our local volunteers in Sierra Leone.

In the United States, we are grateful to our supporters. Join us so that we can increase the frequency of our mobile clinic visits and expand our activities.

Thanks to our dedicated volunteers and sponsors throughout the United States. Join us so that we can expand our reach and make more frequent visits.

Best Regards,
Alfred B. Sesay, Ph.D. Founder, President, and CEO.
