Have you ever gone to school with torn shoes, or even without proper school shoes at all?

Today, I met two young learners who left me speechless. One of them is Peter, a bright boy in Grade 6. For a long time, I've been noticing him walking to school in torn, worn-out shoes that barely hold together. My heart broke. Today, I happened to have just one pair of school shoes with me, and as I helped him put them on, I saw his face light up with joy and relief.

Then, his friend Jane walked up. She greeted me so warmly and, with a gentle but trembling voice, said, "Please, can I also get a pair? Look at my shoes." I looked down, and what I saw left me shaken. Her shoes are in pieces, barely covering her feet, yet she still wears them proudly to school because her dream is bigger than her struggle.

I had nothing left to give... only one pair, and it had already gone to Peter. My heart ached because children like Jane remind us every single day why we do what we do. They may lack, but they still show up. They may struggle, but they still believe in tomorrow.

Friends, I am asking you to stand with Jane. Let's give her the dignity of walking to school with comfortable shoes, just like any child deserves. Your support will mean the world to her. There are many just like her who wish to have shoes, but don't. Help us protect Jane and other children just like her from infections that come from sharp objects and poisonous thorns. We hope to raise $500 USD. We hope it will be a December shoe box gift.

Sometimes it's the smallest acts that create the biggest difference.

Shalom
